Programme Overview

Tsinghua University and The Chinese University of Hong Kong jointly run a four-year undergraduate dual degree programme in Economics. Participating students receive degree certificates from Tsinghua University and The Chinese University of Hong Kong upon meeting the respective degree requirements of the programme.

I chose the Tsinghua University - CUHK Dual Undergraduate Degree Programme in Economics because I have always had an interest in economics and understanding how the world works. Economics studies people, their choices, and how these choices impact other outcomes, all which I find very interesting as this happens in everyday life. I felt that this programme not only allows me to study that inside the classroom, but outside as well by giving me the chance to live in two major cities and economic hubs. I do not only get to study at two very prestigious universities, but I have the opportunity to explore and learn about two vastly different but equally interesting cities and make good friends in both of them.

After graduation, I plan on studying a postgraduate degree, possibly more towards finance or business and getting a job involving investment banking and analysis. "

Having lived in three countries—Japan, China, and the United States—growing up, I knew I wanted a global experience for my university life. The Tsinghua University - CUHK Dual Undergraduate Degree Programme in Economics is a perfect fit as it allows me to pursue two degrees in two distinct yet equally rigorous academic environments. The flexibility in curriculum and exchange patterns is another factor I took into consideration and is what differentiates this program from many others. Through the wide-ranging courses and internship opportunities available from both universities, I am able to explore potential career interests and have access to two markets, two alumni networks.

After four years of undergraduate studies, I plan to base and work in Hong Kong. Studying economics, I am open to all options, though with a tilt towards either the banking or consultancy sectors. "
